

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a transparent touch panel used for operating various electronic apparatuses. More particularly, the invention relates to a transparent touch panel where a dent is hardly generated and an electrical conductive layer is hardly damaged even when an upper surface of the transparent touch panel is continuously pressed. The transparent touch panel includes a sheet formed by sticking an upper film to a lower film via a rubber elastic layer.